THE JEWISH AGENCY COMMISSION'S REPORT

The report of the Agency Commission contains very little to stify the extravagant hopes that were had of its possible value to e Palestine cause; it contains suggestions that should constrain ponists to view the whole situation with grave concern. Its one useful ntribution is the section which defines the proper relationship tween the Jewish people and the mandatory power. This phase s previously been dealt with by the Revisionists with equal candor d force.

The Commission's report contents itself merely with summaries of references to the detailed submissions of the technical experts who d conducted the researches on its behalf. We are required to take e findings for granted without being afforded an opportunity for tical analysis. Now in matters of economics relating to an unprecented situation such as exists in the new settlement in Palestine, e may be pardoned for refusing to treat unsupported and undocuented opinions or dicta as having Sinaic infallibility. Until the l texts of the reports are available there is therefore no constraint regard the summarized report as being more compelling than milar reports that had been offered in the past by observers of pute and standing.

What had the Zionists who consented to the agency deal expected the Agency?

To put it baldly the thing expected in return for the birthright as a substantial mess of pottage. The Palestine effort requires a emendous amount of money. The protagonists of the Keren ayesod with their superb faith in the wisdom and idealism of the wish public had figured on sufficient financial support through the eren Hayesod instrumentality to meet the needs of the Palestine ncure. The response to the Keren Hayesod, though, in a sense atifying, was inadequate. And the task of raising funds was becomg increasingly difficult. The decision to strike a bargain with the ass of non-Zionists looking to their support may, therefore, under e circumstances, have been pardonable. The crux of the situation s the creation of new sources of income for Palestine, regardless the cost.

Now in this connection what does the Agency offer us? It holds t a prospect of raising annually a sum of five million dollars for a riod of five years. Of this amount America is to contribute the m of three million dollars per year.

Let it be understood that this amount is not supplementary to the esent income of the Zionist organization from other sources. The ation of the Agency's collecting machinery contemplates the andonment of the Keren Hayesod and the National Fund. The gency's money will be the only funds available. It will be a substitute the present funds.

What will be the gain in dollars and cents? We have a definite mmitment of five million dollars per year for five years. But the onist organization is at present raising more than five million dollars r year by itself. What will be accomplished will be merely a change labels. Financially the Zionist cause will not gain by the play nomenclature.

In the report the assumption is throughout evident that the Agency is henceforth to be regarded as the supreme instance in the hegemony of Zionist affairs. The Agency is to be the medium for raising funds. The Agency is to be the instrument for the budgetary appropriations. The Agency is to be in control of the political activities incidental to the Palestine effort. It is to have the power to regulate or check the development of the new social institutions which are characteristic of the new settlement in Palestine. In short, the Agency is henceforth to have all the powers which hitherto belonged to the congress, plus additional prerogatives which the Congress as a representative body could not manage to acquire. It will be a body superior to the Congress, without the democratic character of the Congress. And it will not be in a position to offer any greater revenue than is at present available to the Congress.

To those who expected from the Agency Commission a more comprehensive and sweeping view of the situation and requirements in Palestine the report is a disappointment. The Commission saw the problems in Palestine largely in the same light and from the same perspective as the Zionists have done until now. In a sense this is gratifying to the Zionist leadership. Had the Agency Commission brought forth any fundamentally new plans involving a radically different conception of the situation the implication might have been discreditable to the Zionist economics. The Agency Commission substantially agrees with the basic principles as well as the plans and methods of the Zionists. Its criticism deals mainly with details over which the Zionist organization had no control. Indeed, even the range of its financial outlook is no broader than that of the Zionists. Its final figures and totals do not exceed those of the Keren Hayesod. The Agency of the millionaires sets as its objective the sum of five million dollars per year; no more daring an objective than that of the beggarly Zionists.

The Agency report has some interesting observations on some of the institutions in Palestine. But we must not forget that it is very easy for any observer to come to a country and find faults with its existing institutions and offer schemes of reform. The difficulty resides in the fact that institutions lie imbedded in a mass of sentiment and traditions which mere logic cannot loosen. Any sophomore can come to Canada or the United States and evolve a scheme of government that would be on paper vastly superior to the systems in force. Making them acceptable to the people is a different proposition. Only Bolshevism and Fascism are capable of dealing summarily with institutions. The Agency can conveniently make or unmake Kvuzoth and National Funds with a stroke of the pen. A democratic Congress reckoning with popular fancies cannot.

As we see it the Agency report contemplates the eclipse of the Zionist Congress, and its institutions; indeed of the very Zionist organization itself, and the substitution of a small dictatorship similar to that of a Mussolini in their stead. And the price—five million dollars per year.

With the other phases of the Agency situation we will deal in subsequent issues of THE REVIEW.

ROUMANIAN JEWS DECIDE TO ACT IN UNISON

The experiences which Roumanian Jewry lived through during the past few years opened their eyes to the need of united effort for the purpose of vindicating their rights and obtaining a hearing from the Government authorities. Since the war Roumania has received a much larger number of Jews through the several provinces that have been added to it by the Peace Conference. Bessarabia, formerly a province of Russia, and Transylvania, formerly part of Austria, have become part of the Roumanian Commonwealth. These provinces have a considerable Jewish population, so that at present the Jews of Roumania number nearly a million, a goodly proportion of the general population. The various elements of Jewry both in old Roumania and in the annexed provinces were not homogeneous, each having its own institutions and its own form of communal government.

Dr. William Filderman, the president of the Union of Roumanian Jews, has for some time been trying to effect a form of organization which should represent all the diverse elements of the country. Taking advantage of the presence of Mr. Leon Fischer, vice-president of the United Roumanian Jews in America in the country, a conference was assembled which succeeded in creating a central committee which shall endeavour to co-ordinate the work of the various organizations in matters affecting the general welfare of Roumanian Jewry. It is expected that this committee will be to establish greater harmony in Jewish affairs and act as a unit in all Jewish questions.

While at Bucharest, Mr. Leon Fischer was received in audience by the Dowager Queen Marie, with whom he had a lengthy conversation on the position of the Jews in Roumania. Soon after that the Premier, Mr. Bratianu, issued an official declaration in behalf of the Government, emphasizing the determination of the present Liberal Government to protect the Jews in every way. The declaration also expressed satisfaction at the decision of the Union of Roumanian Jews in America to support the Roumanian loan in this country.

Up to date the state has paid out about $200,000 to the sufferers in the Oradea Mare riots, and the sentiment in Roumanian official circles is strong in favour of making still further compensation to the sufferers. In fact, after his visit to Geneva and London in connection with the foreign loan, Minister Titulescu threatened to resign unless proper amends were made to the Jewish sufferers by the Government, indicating that he found the sentiment abroad unfavourable to Roumania in consequence of the riots. The students who participated in the riots were punished by the courts, some of them to as an extensive a term of imprisonment as six months, while a large number of them were excluded from the universities. Several officials who were charged with negligence in warding off the evil were removed from office.

The foundation of a new Jewish hospital was recently laid in Bucharest amidst imposing ceremonies. The ground was purchased by the Joint Distribution Committee, and the building is estimated to cost about $300,000. The Mayor of Bucharest spoke warmly about the needs of such a hospital while a message from the Government, read by the Vice-President of the Chamber of Deputies declared that the Government was determined not to allow the recurrence of the anti-Jewish demonstration. Dr. Bernard Kahn, the European representative of the Joint Distribution Committee, was present and also made an address.

PALESTINE LOOKS FORWARD TO DEVELOPMENT OF THREE CONCESSIONS

The Jerusalem correspondent of the New York Times gives in a recent communication a very clear and hopeful analysis of the economic conditions in Palestine and points out the causes that led to the depression of the past few years. His conclusion as to the future of the economic position of the country is summed up in the following paradox: "Nothing is more indicative of better prospects for the future than the continuation of the economic depression which has now been going on for more than two and a half years." Besides a number of factors that helped to bring out the crisis, the outstanding cause was the habit of living above their means which the new settlers have acquired from the English and American tourists. This habit is gradually passing away now and at present the tendency toward retrenchment, which has been the main factor in the work of the Government, as well as of all public and private concerns, has produced greater normalcy in the life of the individual. The excessive demands of the labourers, the main cause of the crippling of many industries, are becoming tempered now.

The industrial progress of the country is now centred in the development of what is commonly known as the Three Concessions—the exploitation of the mineral wealth of the Dead Sea granted to Mr. Novomeysky, a Palestinian engineer, and Major Tullock, a British engineer; the Rutenberg hydro-electric concession, work on which has already begun on the Jordan, near the Sea of Galilee, and the construction of the Haifa harbour, on which surveying work is now in progress. Although it is realized that none of these will bring actual returns until the lapse of one two or three years, the preparations for them bring a certain sense of security to the people that in the near future the present crisis will be entirely lifted and prosperity will set in.

At the annual convention of the German Zionist Federation, which was held last week in Breslau, Mr. Felix Rosenbluth, a member of the World Zionist Executive Committee, declared that the Zionist organization is planning the introduction of an extensive colonization activity in Palestine in the very near future. The Palestine Economic Corporation of New York recently announced that it would take over 250,000 dunams of land from the Haifa Bay Development Company, a subsidiary organization of the Zion Commonwealth, the organization that found itself in financial difficulties and was the cause of the present controversy in Zionist circles in this country.

Speculation as to the outcome of the sessions of the Palestine Survey Commission, being held this week in London, have been rife in many quarters and excitement has been great both among those who favour and those who oppose the Jewish Agency plan. The strongest opponent of the Agency plan, Vladimir Jabotinsky, arrived in London just prior to the conference and began an agitation for the elimination of professed non-Zionists from the Agency leadership. The findings of the commission and the recommendations that will result therefrom will have to be submitted first to the Non-Partisan Jewish Conference in America and to the Zionist General Council, which will meet in Berlin by the middle of July. Among those participating in the sessions of the commission are Mr. Louis Marshal, Mr. Felix M. Warburg, Dr. Lee K. Frankel, Lord Alfred Mond, Dr. Chaim Weizmann and Herr Oscar Wasserman. It was reported that the Marquis of Reading has been invited to participate in the meetings.

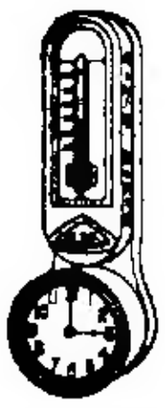
YOU CAN HEAT YOUR HOME BETTER WITH GAS

The Ideal Way to Heat Your Home —With Gas

What a change gas heating brings to the home. No work, no worry—not the slightest responsibility for any member of the family. The gas burner, automatically regulated, goes from fall 'till spring providing complete heating comfort without requiring a moment's thought or attention. Not even fuel to order — and you pay for your fuel after you use it.

This clean, safe, silent method of home heating is ideal. Your gas burner controlled by a heat regulator insures comfortable, even temperature all day long. At night the clock automatically lowers the temperature level for economical, healthful heating and in the early morning raises it back so the house is warm when you get up.



Winding the Heat Regulator Clock is the only "furnace tending" you do with gas heating.

every friday

Last week the Sisterhood of Goel Tzedek Synagogue received word from the Women's League of the United Synagogue of America of a resolution passed by the Conference Committee of National Women's Organizations. This resolution says that at all dinners and public functions under Jewish auspices which make their appeal to Jews of all shades of religious opinion the dietary laws should be observed; also that the Jewish Sabbath should be strictly observed in all public functions and public institutions maintained by and for the Jewish community. The Women's League is an organization of orthodox women. For its committee to go into session over the dietary laws and Sabbath observance seems sort of pointless unless things are not what they should be. This resolution may mean that orthodox women should demand that kosher food be served at public dinners for the whole community and that the Sabbath be observed as it should be according to their ideas but it also must be a reminder to the orthodox women that they observe the rules themselves. Kashruth keeps on being the chiefest concern of orthodox sessions, although it is as old as the hills. Every one knows that an orthodox Jewish married woman should wear a sheitel and that a Jew should not shave his face but it is rude to bring up this obligation of orthodoxy because no one wants to observe it and most slide out of it. Resolutions are completely silent on this subject but they can speak freely on the observance of the dietary laws and the Sabbath day. These are easier to observe or easier to appear to be observing and no questions asked. Meantime, Where is that Younger Generation?"

From Israel's Messenger, Shanghai, China:

"Our contemporary The Canadian Jewish Review, Toronto, maintains a column under the title "every friday" conducted by f.f.c. which helps to serve as the best dish for Sabbath eve with which to welcome Queen Sabbath. We are assured that 'the column exercises its glorious and inestimable privilege of taking things lightly' whereas when it made reference to the 'low ebb' of Jewish journalism in the land of the gold dollar, we took things seriously and passed our honest and candid opinion of how things look from far-off Shanghai. The Jewish Review in reply said a few words to serve as 'oneg Shabbath' to its readers which we reproduce.

"By 'low state' this column meant the fact that it is getting increasingly more difficult for one Jewish paper to appropriate articles from another Jewish paper without getting caught. It must be confessed that this irreverent structure was poking fun at Jewish journalism of which it is such an inconsequential part. Among the editors, who, sadly enough, have never learned to laugh, is one, Mr. Ezra, of Israel's Messenger, Shanghai, China, a gentleman given over to Things Worth While. From an editorial, taking up twice the floor space of this column, the following is an excerpt."

"At the time we read the article, we must confess we did not see anything in it to provoke mirth or laughter as we often do when we celebrate our Purim semi-festival. We were rather sadly affected, for the future seemed to us and still seems to us somewhat alarming. And yet f.f.c. credits the present writer as 'one of the Editors who sadly enough have never learned to laugh.' Very nicely put! On the other hand, we would like f.f.c. to point a way for us to learn to laugh, and a quick method at that. We agree with our mirthful colleague in far-off Canada that laughter is a necessary and useful exercise, for it is appositely said, 'Blessed be he who can indulge in laughter, but thrice blessed is he who can cause it, conjure it up at will.'"

The conference of Jewish social workers and educators held last month in Cincinnati was interesting because it took up at least one other problem besides those which affect the young chiefly. At a meeting of community centre secretaries, for instance, Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, speaking on adult education, said: "The normal span of life to-day is sixty-five years. Because of this and because individuals to-day have more leisure than in former years, we must develop a programme of adult education for adventure and fine living in mature life." Here is something to provoke thought and approval. A young girl graduate of Wellesley College, when asked last year what she was going to do after graduation, said succinctly: "Enjoy life." To some this may have sounded like the flippant remark of a heedless flapper. Instead it was the reply of a student who had some inkling of what education is for.

This present restless generation is a powerful argument in favour of education for adventure and fine living in mature life, particularly as far as women are concerned. Modern appliances and mode of living have so simplified the duties of even the moderately well-to-do, that women uneducated for it find themselves with plenty of leisure for beautiful adventure and fine living if they only knew how to go about it. But in the lamented, halcyon days before the flapper age the adults of to-day may not have been educated in a way that would lead them to fine living now. Education meant an accumulation of facts and was gone through for some special purpose as a rule. That purpose was not beautiful living. Young people, if taught, heard that they should be upright, noble, holy, honest, do good, be self-sacrificing, etc., and they then would naturally be happy. To-day the young might answer back: "And that ain't all." They learn to express themselves a little, to laugh and play, and to leaven life thereby.

Their parents with plenty of leisure have nothing to do and no place to go except to amusements and diversions no more naturally stimulating than a roulette wheel. They have no resources stored up within themselves and can stand any company better than their own. Pathetically they confuse pleasure with joy and entertainment with happiness. Their leisure moments are spent in losing the sands of life, in killing time. Social conferences are so worried over them that they plan programmes for adult education in some self-expression. This idea sounds very promising, too, but what a pity it is necessary! Some day, perhaps, the educators will know how to help people to the full enrichment of the individual personality, to glorious adventure and fine living in mature life. It may not be to-morrow or the day after, but it is in the air.

Bruno Wolff, Viennese Jewish editor, was shot and instantly killed before a startled courtroom by Oscar Poesal, a Catholic, who had brought Wolff before the court on charges of libel against him. The shooting was the climax of a long feud between the two, dating back to 1925 when they were both editors of the Wiener Neues Journal. At that time the accusations of Wolff against Poesal of corrupt practices, led to Poesal's dismissal from his post as assistant to Wolff. Wolff later repeated his charges in public and Poesal brought the damage suit.

Max Silverstein and Max L. NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, minerals, water, power, fish game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate, farming and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

LIBERALS WIN IN GERMAN ELECTIONS

The reactionaries and the anti-Semitic groups met with defeat in the Reichstag elections which were held in Germany last week. The Hitler party, the extreme anti-Semitic party, returned twelve instead of the former fifteen Deputies. The Folkish National group and several other anti-Semitic parties were entirely defeated in the elections. The tension before the elections was so intense that Jews were advised not to discuss politics with anyone and the Jewish press was apparently very much afraid of possible anti-Jewish demonstrations during the elections. The police also has been warned and precautions were taken to prevent any demonstration that may lead to riot and bloodshed.

George Bernhardt, editor of the Vossische Zeitung, was elected to the Reichstag. Complete returns will probably reveal the election of many other Jews. Bernhardt was elected on the Democratic ticket, and it was rumored that he would be slated as candidate for the post of Minister of Foreign Affairs in the new Cabinet. Several Jews were returned on the Socialist and Communist tickets. The latter returned fifty-four Deputies instead of the forty-five that they had in the former Reichstag.

Of the Jewish Community games played last week, the climax was Wednesday night, when the League all-stars managed by Joe Fiamark won from the C. & B. team. In the Monday game, Hasmonians fought a tie game with the leaders, Herzls, 3—3, with the game being called in the sixth. Manny and Harry Stone both hit well with three apiece, while Hurwitz and Salberg played good ball for Hasmonians. In the Tuesday games, Y.M.H.A. won a tight game from Judean Benevolent, scoring in the last inning, while in the second game Leonards won from Tuex, score 6—2, with Issie Boosin getting four hits, and "Lefty" Glasner pitching a smart game. In the Wednesday games, Herzls beat Bnai Brith, 8—3, Issie Gold being the big hitter. In the late game the All Stars played fine ball to beat the east-end C. & B. team, Bill Sniderman twirling good ball while the rest of the team were on their toes. Harry Stone and Max Cohen starred at short and second, while George Altman was the star of the game with his fine catches in deep centre, the last catch ending the game while C. & B. had the winning runs on base, and in addition he completed a fine double play by smart fielding. Miller, the Hasmonian catcher, had four hits, one a homer to lead the hitting. The results of the Bnai Brith vs. Weintraubs game on last Wednesday night will be given in the next issue of the REVIEW. The young actress made her debut before Montreal theatre audiences in the winter of 1926, when she played an extended engagement at the Palace Theatre. In the summer of the same year she was seen in one of the principal roles in the "Little Revue that Starts at 10 After Nine," an intimate type of show that was housed for several weeks at the Orpheum Theatre, Miss Stein scored decisively with her song, "Dishwashing Annie." Her last appearance in Canada was at Montreal in the winter of last year, when she returned to the Palace Theatre and followed this up with a short engagement at the Venetian Gardens.

MAIL BOX

Editor, CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW:

To those who have at heart the growth of intelligent interest in Hebrew literature, the lack of a suitable collection of Hebrew books available to the public in Toronto has been a matter of considerable concern. This deficiency has to some extent been remedied by the creation of a Hebrew library on the initiative of a number of people who desire to assist and foster interest in Hebrew letters.

A considerable and varied collection has already been assembled, principally through presentations and purchases. The library has quarters at 387 Spadina Avenue. Books are available for general circulation on Sundays from 12 to 1 p.m., and on Wednesdays from 8 to 9 p.m.

All who take an interest in Hebrew, or who desire to do so, are invited to make use of this library. A reading room, containing prominent Hebrew periodicals, is also provided.

How ICE Serves and Saves

SOLELY from a dollars-and-cents standpoint, the service of ice in saving food yields a big profit on the investment.

Ice in a good refrigerator keeps food at its best. Food is served in prime condition—meats with all of their full-flavored juices intact—vegetables as fresh and as crisp as when gathered—fruits with their precious, elusive natural flavors as the highest point of perfection.

Keep the ice chamber well filled. This not only saves ice but safeguards food.
